

Abstract

A method and apparatus are provided for guiding a conversation taking place between a client and an agent through a communication system. The method includes the steps of detecting an information content of the conversation, determining a goal of the client from the detected information content and suggesting a conversation topic to the agent to guide the conversation towards the goal of the client.